

Arghya Kusum Das is a PhD student in the Division of Computer Science and Engineering at Louisiana State University.

He received his bachelor's in computer science from West Bengal University of Technology, India.

His primary research focus is in the intersection of high performance big data applications and distributed-cyber-infrastructure.